iQ Hello, My Name is…

Homework from Workshop #3: myVoice

Intent: Provide classmates with a short minute audio piece that introduces yourself.

Please remember this is just an exercise for learning two things: (a) audio recording techniques used with an iPhone and (b) simple audio editing techniques done on an iPhone.

The spirit of how to approach this is lifted from those super embarrassing (later tedious) stickers that all of us have been asked to write in our names, using fat magic markers, when entering a reception or party where we won't know many people. Nor they us.

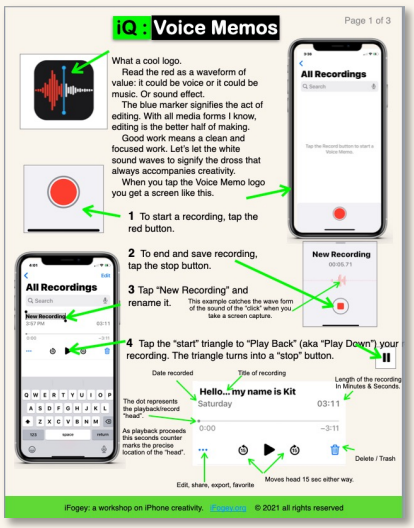
Consider these approach choices: do you want an informal tone (improvised with colloquial vocabulary) or a more formal one (scripted)? Or can you imagine some off-the-wall approach designed to evoke a grin.

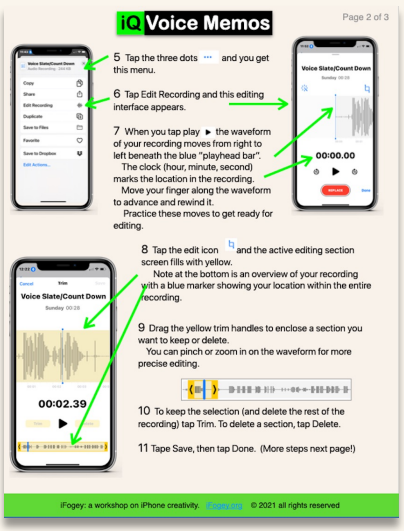
Step One: Record two minutes of introducing yourself by voice. Use the Voice Memos soft ware. There is a pdf file that breaks this into discrete steps: iQ: Voice Memos.

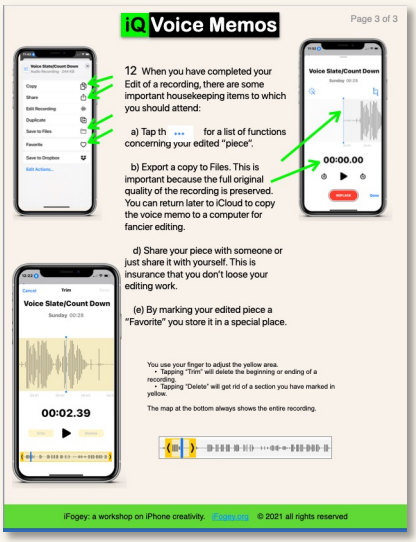
Step Two: Playback. Most of us are a bit freaked when we hear our voices. We never sound familiar to ourselves. But chances are the track you laid down will be perfectly good enough for this homework project. You can re-record if you absolutely hate the recording.

Step Three: Use the Voice Memos app to edit your "source" recording down to between 45 and 60 seconds.

Step Four: Make two copies of your audio piece. Please place one in your personal site at iFogey.org. Please place the other copy in the # 3Homework folder at iFogey.org..







See Workshop #3 folder for pdf of iQ: Voice Memos